A workspace benefit for our team

Not The Couch is an employer-paid allowance of desk days and meeting rooms at professional coworking spaces in Christchurch, so your people can work near home, in town or wherever suits the day. Never the kitchen table.

How it works

- You add your people and set how many days each gets a month, and a monthly budget.
- They pick a space on the day, scan the QR code at reception and check in on their phone: a desk, or a meeting room or day office if you allow them.
- You get one invoice a month in NZD, with your PO number. Usage by person, team and location is on your dashboard.

What it costs

Desk days	Each space's walk-in price, typically $49 a day. Meeting rooms and day offices at the space's own prices, if you allow them.
Admin fee	$8 per person enrolled, per month. Covers reporting, invoicing and support.
Your budget	You set it, and it's never exceeded: check-ins pause if it's reached. You don't pay for days not used.
Set-up fees and leases	None.

All prices exclude GST.

Control, privacy and tax

- For work only, on weekdays during each space's opening hours, with check-ins closing at 5pm. Each person agrees before their first check-in.
- What you see: days used by person and team. Switch on visit detail to see which space each person used and when; your people are told first. No live location tracking.
- Tax: it's a place for your people to do their work, for work only, so it's designed to be FBT-free. Check it with your adviser.

Try it for 60 days

A pilot for 5 to 20 of your people, with the admin fee at half price ($4 a person a month), a launch kit (staff announcement, benefit policy and privacy notice) and a pilot summary at day 60 for your leadership team. No obligation to continue. Starting between 24 November and 31 December? It runs 81 days, so the summer shutdown doesn't use it up.

> Founding customers: the first five employers to start a pilot pay no admin fee at all during it, in return for a short case study about how it went.
